You can vote for donations to Clackamas Bookshelf, North Clackamas Education Foundation or Clackamas Service Center

iQ, a credit union based in the Pacific Northwest, recently opened its third Oregon branch in Happy Valley. The new branch is located in the Crossroads East shopping center, 13220 S.E. 172nd Ave. Suite 168.

To celebrate the opening of its new location, iQ invites the community to visit the branch and place a vote for a nonprofit. From now until the end of December, votes can be cast for the Clackamas Bookshelf, North Clackamas Education Foundation or Clackamas Service Center. The nonprofit with the most votes will be awarded $3,000, and $1,000 will go to each runner-up.

RENDERING COURTESY: GRAMOR DEVELOPMENT - Happy Valley Crossroads, a mixed-use development constructed about five years ago, features a 145,000-square-foot Fred Meyer.

"Happy Valley remains the fastest-growing city in Oregon, and we're excited to expand our reach to provide more convenient services to members throughout the Southwest Washington and Portland metro area," said Ali Migaki, chief retail officer for iQ Credit Union. "At iQ, it's important that we make an impact on the lives of our members and make their community a better place to live, work and bank."

The community branch offers a full suite of financial products and services. Local staff will provide insurance, investment and mortgage services.

In partnership with the local North Clackamas Chamber of Commerce, iQ will host an official ribbon-cutting ceremony on Dec. 15.
